Marsha,

Please forgive me for not writing much the first time so this time I will fill this whole page with words of love. You are to me like peaches are to cream, like bread to butter. We belong. But I must not forget that you are a married woman, to dead, I would have made a wonderful husband. But if life ever gets you down just call on me and I'll go with. I don't know why but in the last couple months I have really grown to like you. I consider you as my friend (sorry) and always want to be. Because after all if I can't have you for my own, I'll have to settle for the next best thing, a friend (poop)

I would like to wish you the best of luck in the years to come and especially in old age. I hope the rotten shadow of gloom never brushes across your beautiful eyes.

I hope you are happy for the rest of your life.

Love always
Patsy

"Time does not exist without change.

Time is neither movement nor independent of movement.

Time—past, present, and future, forms a continuous whole.

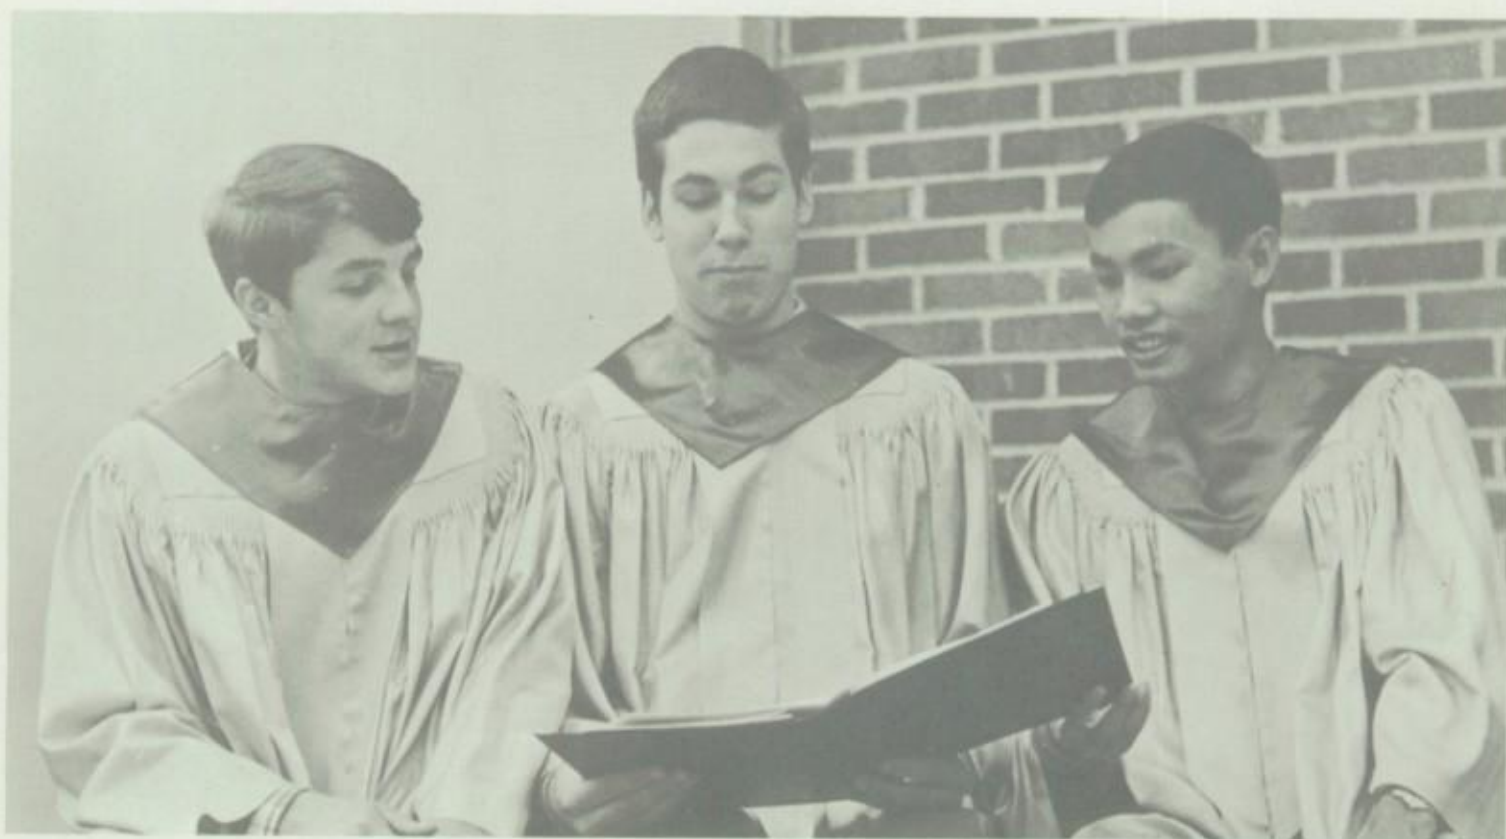

The present moment—the 'now', is the link of time,

The dividing line between past and future—

An indivisible instant."

Aristotle

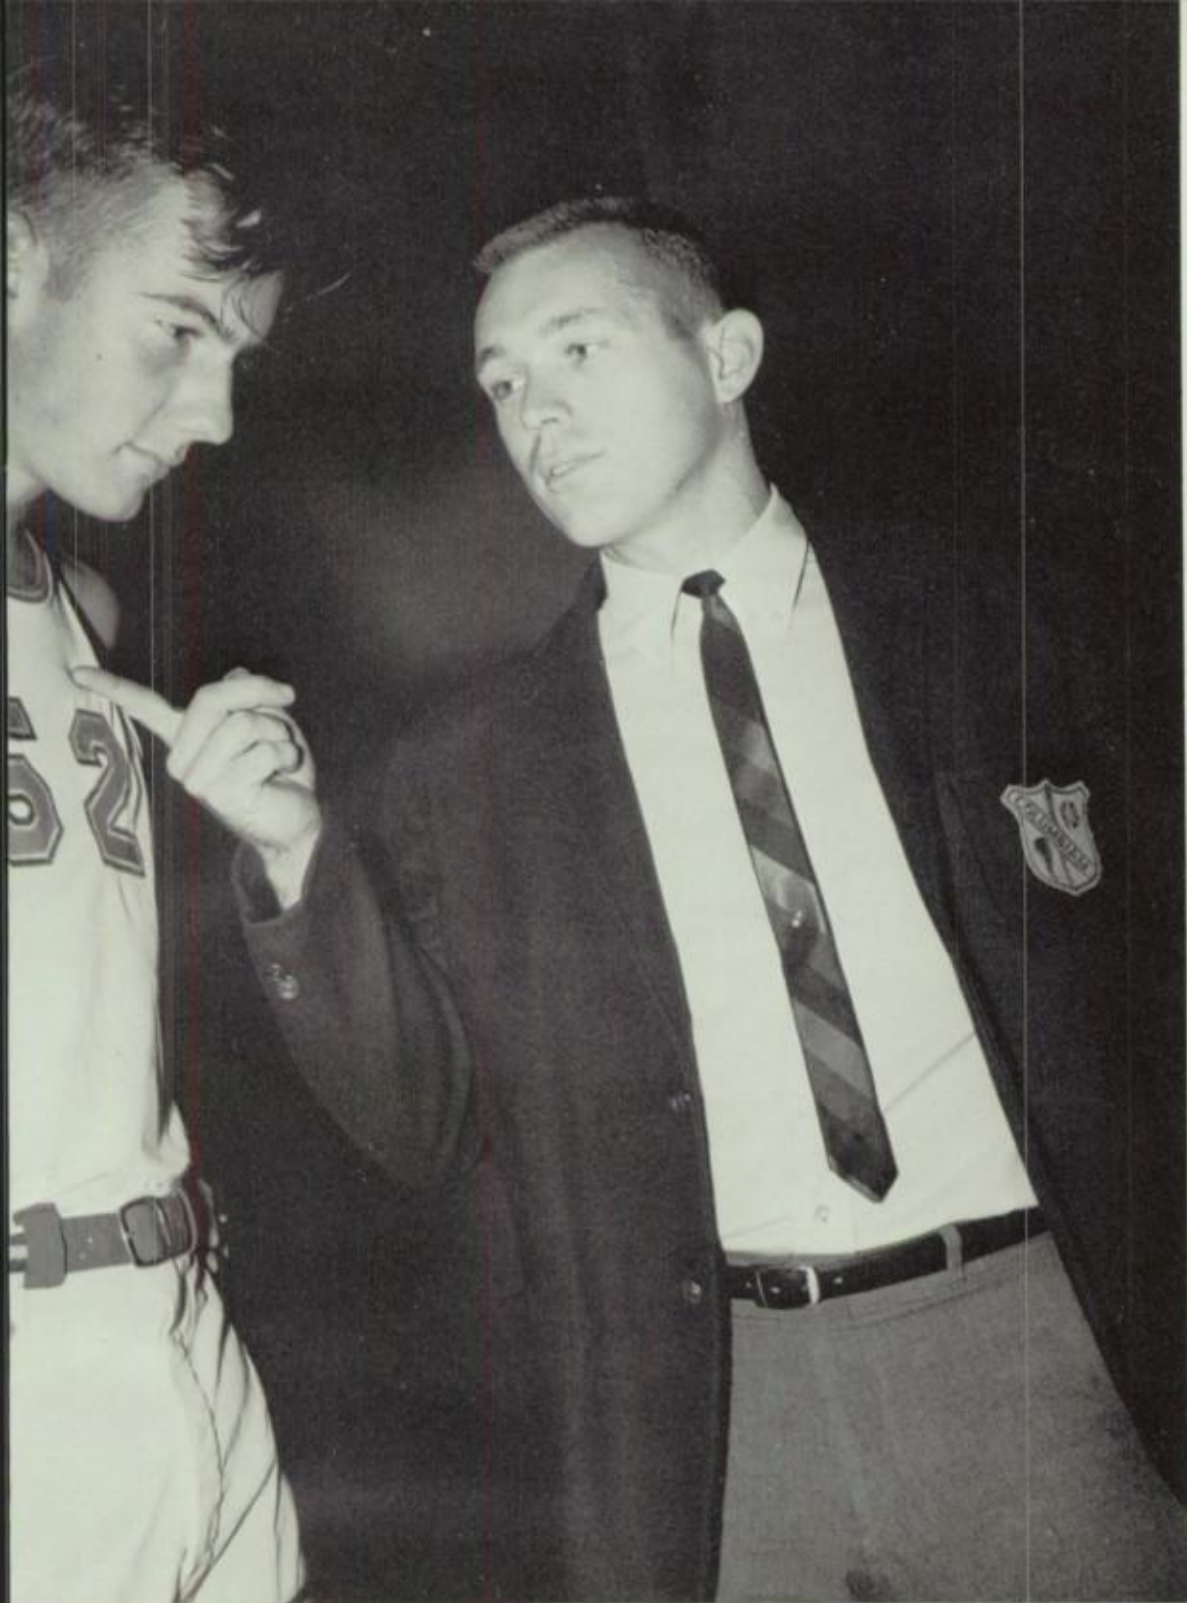

The doors of Columbian opened on September 6, 1967, to the largest enrollment in the history of the school. Students were eager to meet new faculty members and to receive new football uniforms, band uniforms, and pep squad outfits. The presence of several world cultures, in addition to our own, enabled Columbianites to make a contribution in the quest for better understanding of all people.

Anxious students quickly grew accustomed to the various changes at Columbian and soon found themselves involved in the many activities of high school life.

Spirit is found in many ways, in achievement for ourselves, for our school, and for our community. Spirit may be a silent act within each individual or a strained effort to pursue and attain excellence.

Tornado enthusiasm has been consistently growing. This year proved to be no exception because our obvious pride in Columbian was ever-present.

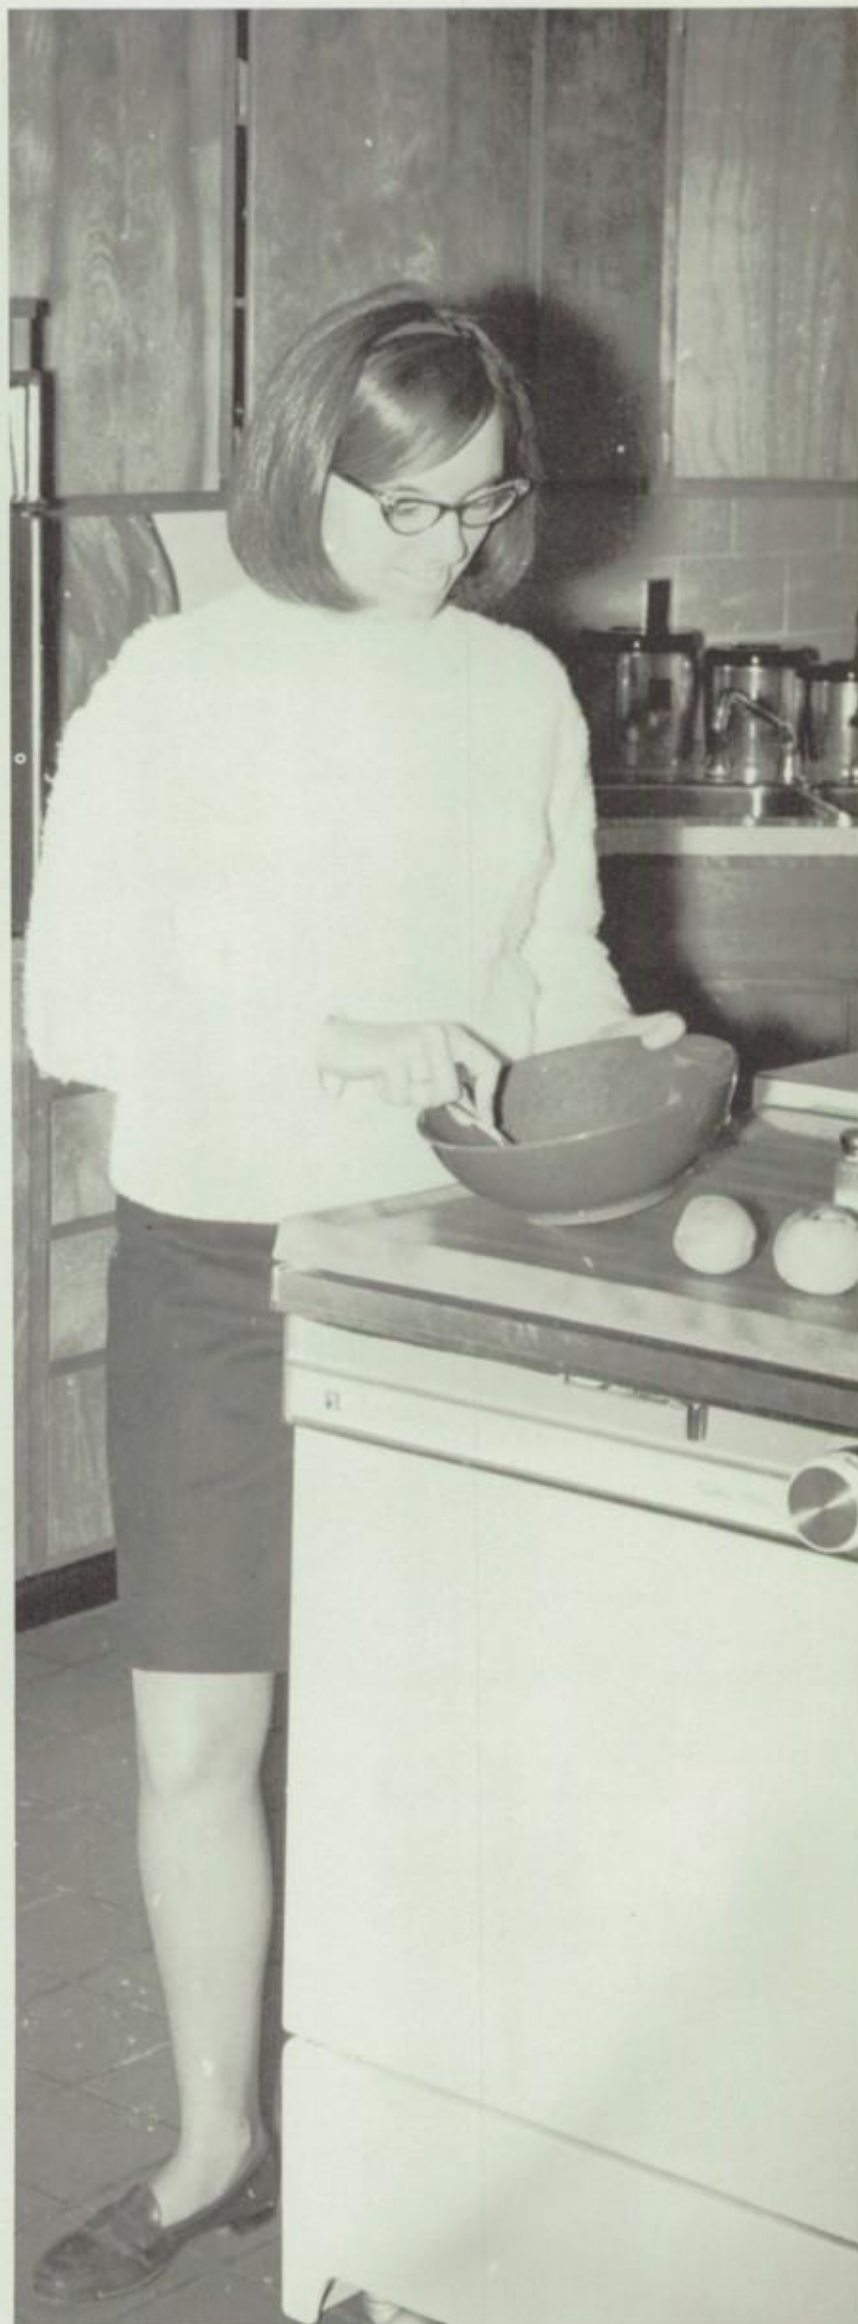

For the underclassmen, 1967-68 was a time for researching in the library, working in the home economics department, participating in class discussions, and preparing for dramatics productions.

The Sophomores and Juniors were determined to set new and exciting goals. This past year has been a step to the future—a link of time between the care-free days of childhood and the mature responsibilities they would face as adults.

Underclassmen formulated the principles which would guide them throughout their lives.

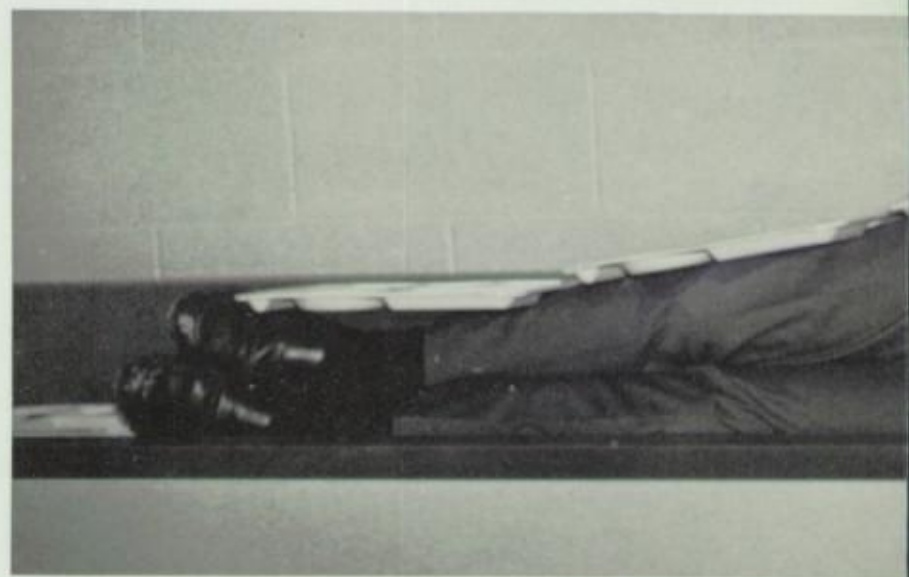

Whether alone in a study hall early in the morning before the halls are crowded with students, or pausing to look in retrospect to the thrill of receiving an official class ring, students belong in the atmosphere of Columbian. Couples find a time to be alone, even though the cheers of the crowd call them to the thrill of the Friday night game.

Success comes in many ways to each student, whether on the gridiron or in the classroom. TCHS . . .

Activities? Whether it's "goofing around" in the cafeteria, contemplating in a quiet corner, or backing the team at a pep rally, Columbian students have excelled in all activities.

They have given hours of time, energy, and individual talents to different events throughout the year. Participating in school activities helped each student to build his character and to develop a better understanding of his fellow students and himself. Columbianites took pride in working together!

ACTIVITIES

Choir . . . A Change of Pace

Choir members don their robes before an assembly.

Vocal music provided a break in the daily routine of school life. Hard work, as well as the fun and excitement of rehearsals, was culminated with successful performances.

The Choristers helped to represent the choirs at various functions in the Tiffin area.

By working together, the choirs have encouraged an appreciation of music at Columbian.

Mrs. Miller shows the accompanists S. Egbert, V. Ohl, J. Randell, D. Debusman, G. Dolch, R. Routh, and M. Fahrenbruck, the proper fingering techniques.

President Beth Gamble discusses plans for the Winter Concert with other band officers.

Achieving Self-Expression Through Music

On the football field or the concert stage, the band members of Columbian were always striving for perfection. Marching band began in early August when the members started to practice for the football pre-game and half-time shows. They will remember the gaiety of the bus trips out-of-town and the disappointment of standing under an umbrella while rain poured down on the gridiron.

The concert season began in November. The program was changed by featuring the Symphonic Band, composed mostly of juniors and seniors, the Concert Band, composed mostly of sophomores and a newly organized orchestra.

Members of these three groups helped boost school spirit by participating in the pep band at home basketball games.

Under the direction of Mr. Lewis Hawk, the band members, wherever they were, could always be proud of a job well done.

Beyond the Classroom

In the summer of 1967, Cathy Rozenman was Columbian's delegate to Buckeye Girls' State at Capitol University, while Bob Horn was the Boys' State delegate at Ohio University. They participated in mock government, organized at both local and state levels and had the opportunity to hear several excellent speakers.

Vicki Ohl and Susie Egbert spent two weeks last summer in Michigan at Camp Miniwanca, a leadership training camp. There they experienced the principles of a four-fold life: social, physical, religious, and mental.

Last October the kick-off assembly for Columbian's annual Magazine Campaign was held. In order to uphold the winning tradition of T.C., all decided to sell, sell, sell. However, the sophomores topped the juniors and seniors by reaching their goal first and ultimately selling the most magazines. High individual sellers were Richar Routh, Judy Shellhouse, Dianne Bickley (standing) and Randy VanNette. The advisor for our successful campaign was Mrs. Mahoney.

QUEEN JANET SHERMAN

The crowning of a new queen.

It was a perfect weekend for Homecoming at T.C.H.S. Friday evening, October 6, 1967, the Tiffin Tornadoes met Galion for the Homecoming Game. The pre-game festivities began with the five Queen candidates and their escorts, senior boys selected by members of their class. The rich sound of the Marching Band honored them with "The Impossible Dream." After crossing the field, last year's Queen crowned Janet Sherman, 1967 Homecoming Queen. To add the finishing touch that evening, the Columbian Football Squad downed Galion, 14—8.

On the following Saturday night, Queen Janet and her court were honored at the annual Homecoming Dance held in the cafeteria. Decorations resembled a football field and all danced to the music furnished by "Our Changing Moods."

'67 Homecoming . . . the Best Ever

All elements of Homecoming make the weekend perfect.

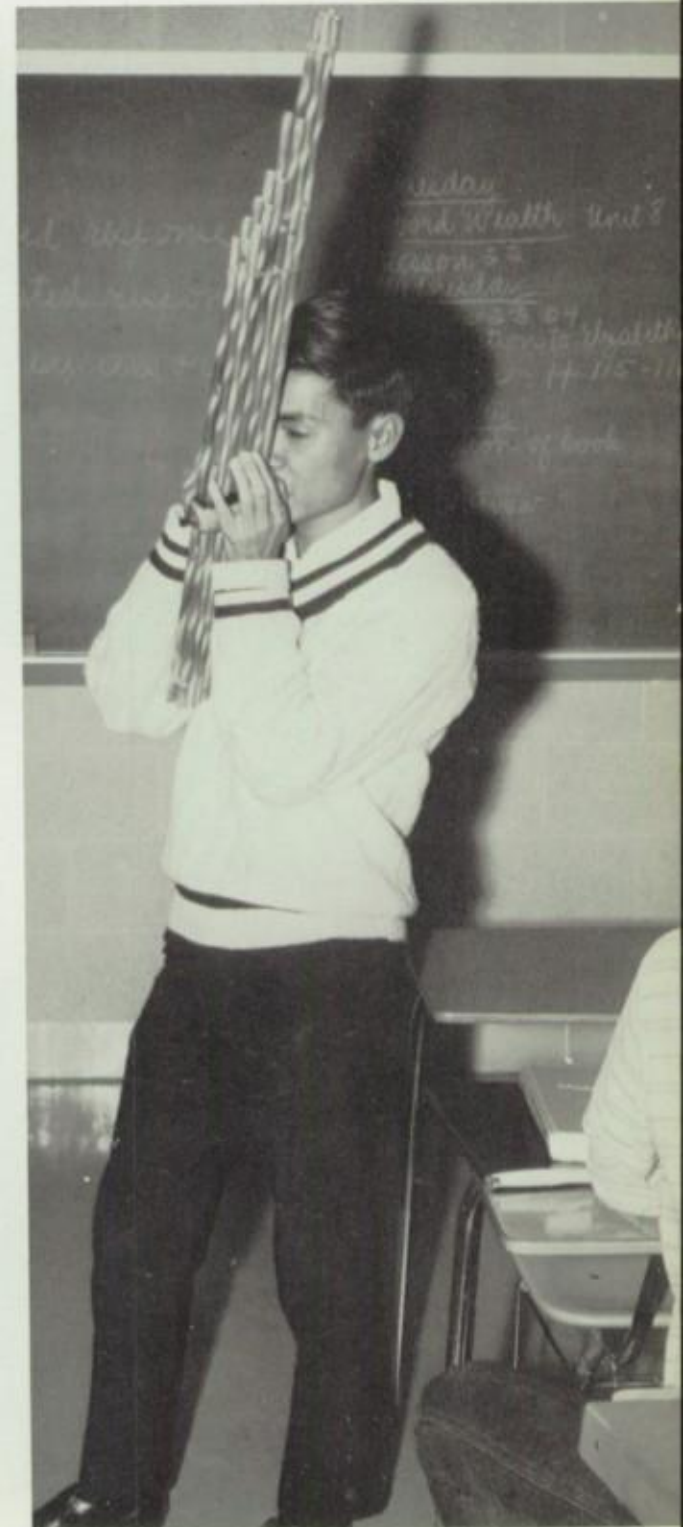

An Exchange of Cultures Promotes

Columbian is proud to host three foreign students this year. Vilay Chaleunrat from Vientiane in Laos spent his second year here under the SHEP (Student Highschool Education Program) supervised by AFS. The American Field Service sponsored Luis Horacio Hoyos Orozco who came from Bogota, Columbia. Burckhardt Eppinger from Metzinger, Germany came to Tiffin through the IYCE (International Youth Christian Exchange.) In the summer of 1967 T.C.H.S. sent Rick Noss as the AFS student abroad to Bombay, India.

Through these programs, individuals of different nations presented their distinct cultures, and fostered good will. With programs such as these, Columbian High continues to promote internationalism, the growth of understanding among nations.

Internationalism

Pandemonium—

On March 8, 1968, the T.C. gym was invaded by a multitude of hippies, superhumans, and historical heroes. Thus, the battle of the classes began. The seniors used their "flower power" to defeat the supposedly "super" juniors by a score of 46 to 38. The seniors could now boast the winning of each of the four interclass games during their high school years. The Huskies of the sophomore class downed the Sophomore Senators by a score of 35 to 34.

As the hippies re-entered society, the superhumans came down to earth, and the sophomores departed from the pages of their history books, all mixed for the sock hop in the gym after the game.

Interclass Games '68

Activities

Set the Pace

The activities of Columbian are never ending and impossible to define. They can mean something special, such as the Women's Club Sewing Award given to Carolyn Everetts and Mary Lake for their sewing skills. Or they can mean the everyday activities at T.C.—capturing certain moments at the Christmas Dance, decorating on a Saturday morning for the Homecoming Dance, fighting for mirror space as the last minutes of gym class tick by, discovering Snoopy in the hall display case, or just gazing in dismay at the flat tire on the Galion bus in our parking lot.

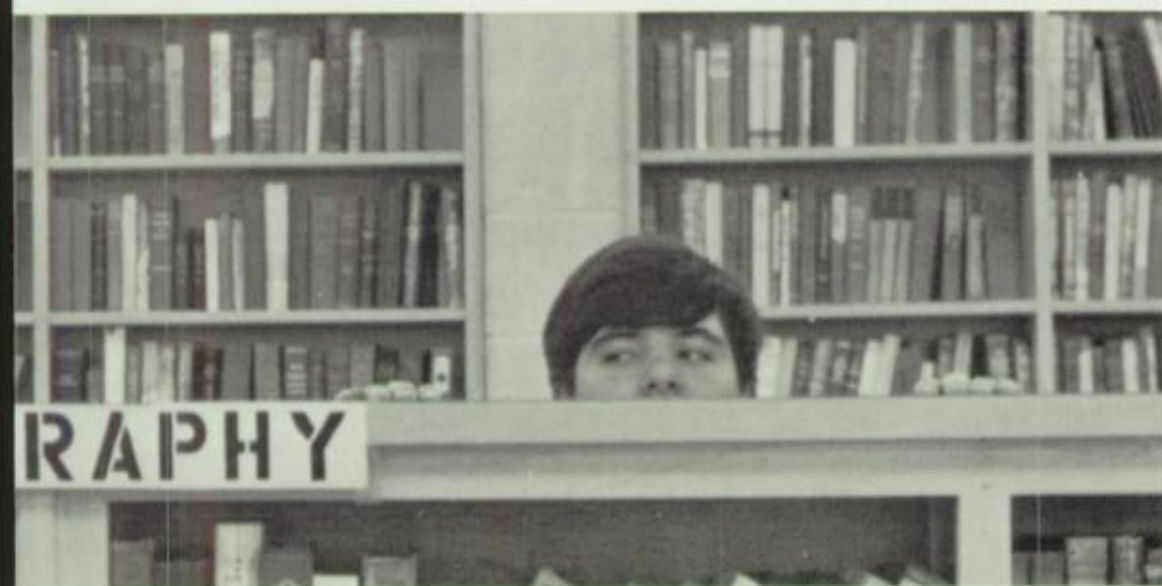

Whether organized or “unorganized,” the activities of Columbian add interest to the student's daily routine.

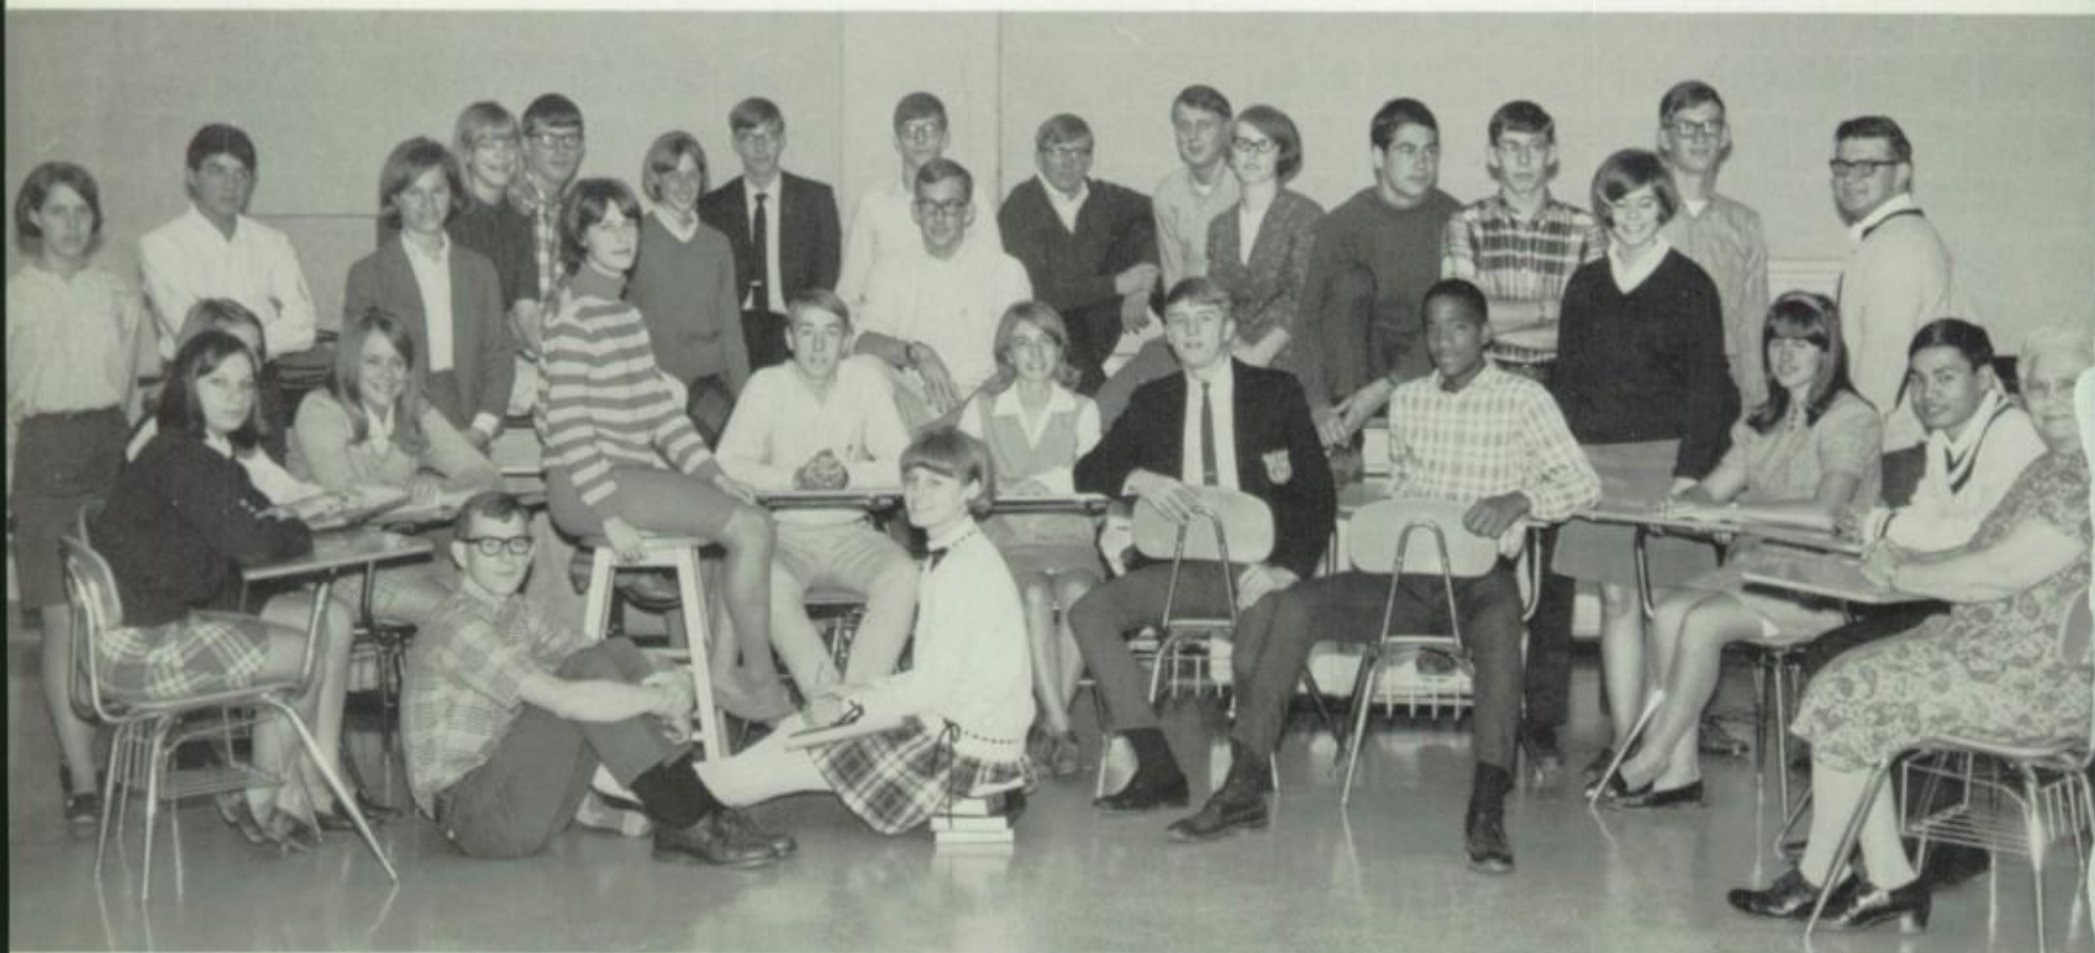

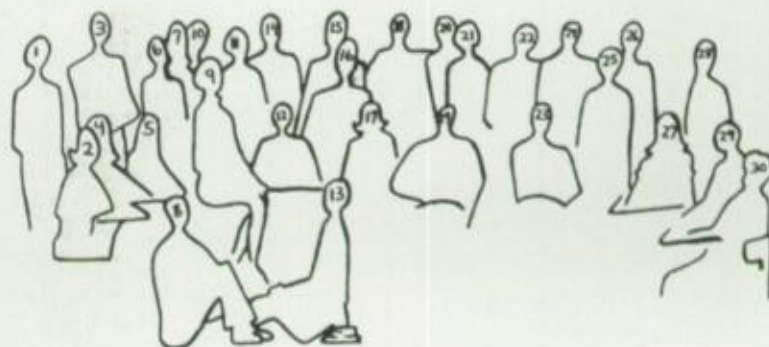

A novice actor portrayed his soul to a mass of shrewd judges and found a heart full of words in their applause. A biology student focused in on unsuspecting bacteria and a message was discovered there. A solid halfback ran a touchdown and found the letter sewn on his sweater. What is this unspoken communication found by the dramatist or the letterman? It can be found throughout Columbian High School. It is spirit. It is the passing of time. It is ambition, grief, and yearning. It means hours after school and on weekends. It means a more fulfilled student. These were our organizations, bounded not by mathematical numbers but by human fellowship.

Active Council Guides T.C.H.S.

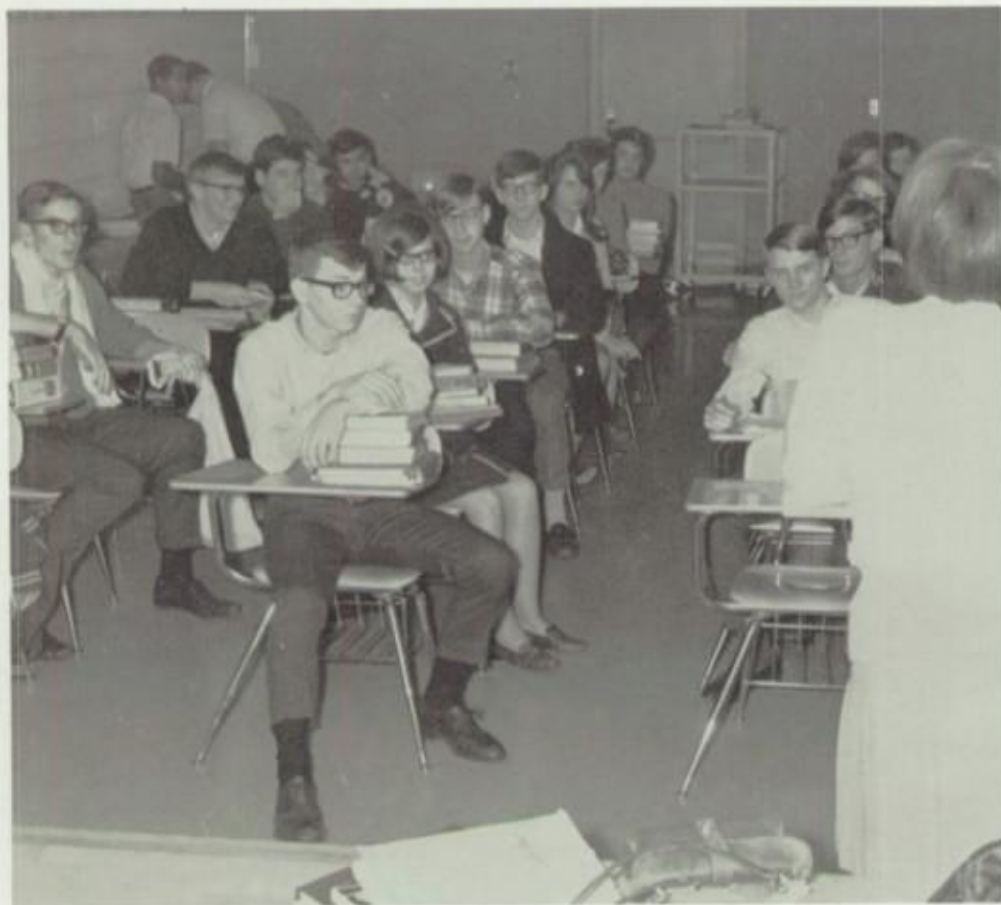

Student Council advisor Miss Dietzel introduces the 1967-68 Council officers, Scott Kieffer, treasurer; Kathi Orwig, secretary; Carla Lampe, president; John Alleman, vice-president; Lisa Wade, reporter, to Principal James Ross.

"With continued loyal student body support and spirit, we will be assured of a strong Council and a successful year." These words, spoken by Student Council vice-president, John Alleman, echoed down Columbian's corridors. The past school year produced one of the strongest student governments that ever studied, discussed, voted, reformed and aided Columbian High School.

All-school assemblies held a special interest as the Council presented a variety of programs including the Thanksgiving, AFS, Honor, and the Easter assemblies.

The 1967-68 Columbian Student Council through dedicated effort and work made a most successful school year for T.C.H.S.

Once a month, a small group of people gather together to talk of Rome and the Romans. The Ides of March approached and to the surprise of T.C. students, strange items such as models of Roman soldiers, maps planned with strategy, catapults, and chariots, began to pour into "Rome" 215. Was this the beginning of a plan to overthrow Columbian?

No—this group known as the Laeti Latini, or Happy Latins, is none other than Columbian High School's Latin Club. It is composed of the junior and senior Latin students, with Miss Dietzel as their advisor.

This year Anne Mathias, as Primus Consul, presided over such meetings as an initiation of new members, an Alumni Christmas party, and a talent show. Other officers were: Ed Focht, Secundus Consul; Cassy Tippin, Scriba; Elizabeth Hope, Quaestor; Janis Snyder, Aedile.

They're Tops at T.C.

Seniors find good times and friendship, while they practice being "out" of school.

Having disciplined themselves and put good study habits into practice, these T.C. students earned a point average of 3.5 or 3.2. This year the Honor Society consisted of 154 sophomores, juniors, and seniors.

The officers of this year's Honor Society are: Richard Swander, president; Robyn Turner, vice-president; Jeanne Noss, secretary; Harvey Curran, treasurer. Under the direction of these officers and advisor, Miss Dietzel, committees are formed to plan a banquet held in the spring to honor these students.

Juniors work to achieve high marks, but they always find time for fun.

Sophomores hit the books to make the grade at T.C.

Stargazers Observe Heavens

A UFO! Visiting aliens would be surprised if they happened upon Columbian High School's stargazer group. Astronomy Club members have been spotted sneaking suspiciously down to the stadium on cold, clear nights, armed with an amazing arsenal of telescopes, charts, and binoculars. Mr. Clausen, the advisor, claims the members were observing planetary transits, tracing aphelion orbits, mapping lunar positions, locating solar medians, and perhaps observing a comet, eclipse, or some other celestial phenomenon. But after some probing, Jim Boroff, the club president, admitted that secretly members are more often searching for UFO's.

Staff members wait on hungry basketball fans to aid Tiffinian financial status.

The Tiffinian is Columbian High School's monthly newspaper. The staff this year comprised the largest number of students ever to work on the school paper.

The publication took on a new look this year by switching to newsprint paper and increasing the page size from five to six columns.

The Senior staff, advised by Mrs. Schar, wrote and edited The Tiffinian for the majority of the first semester, and in February, the Junior staff began to compose the paper.

In order to work on The Tiffinian, a student must take Journalism in his junior year. This course, a combination of American Literature and newspaper practices, acquaints the student with journalistic procedures and readies him for participation on the staff.

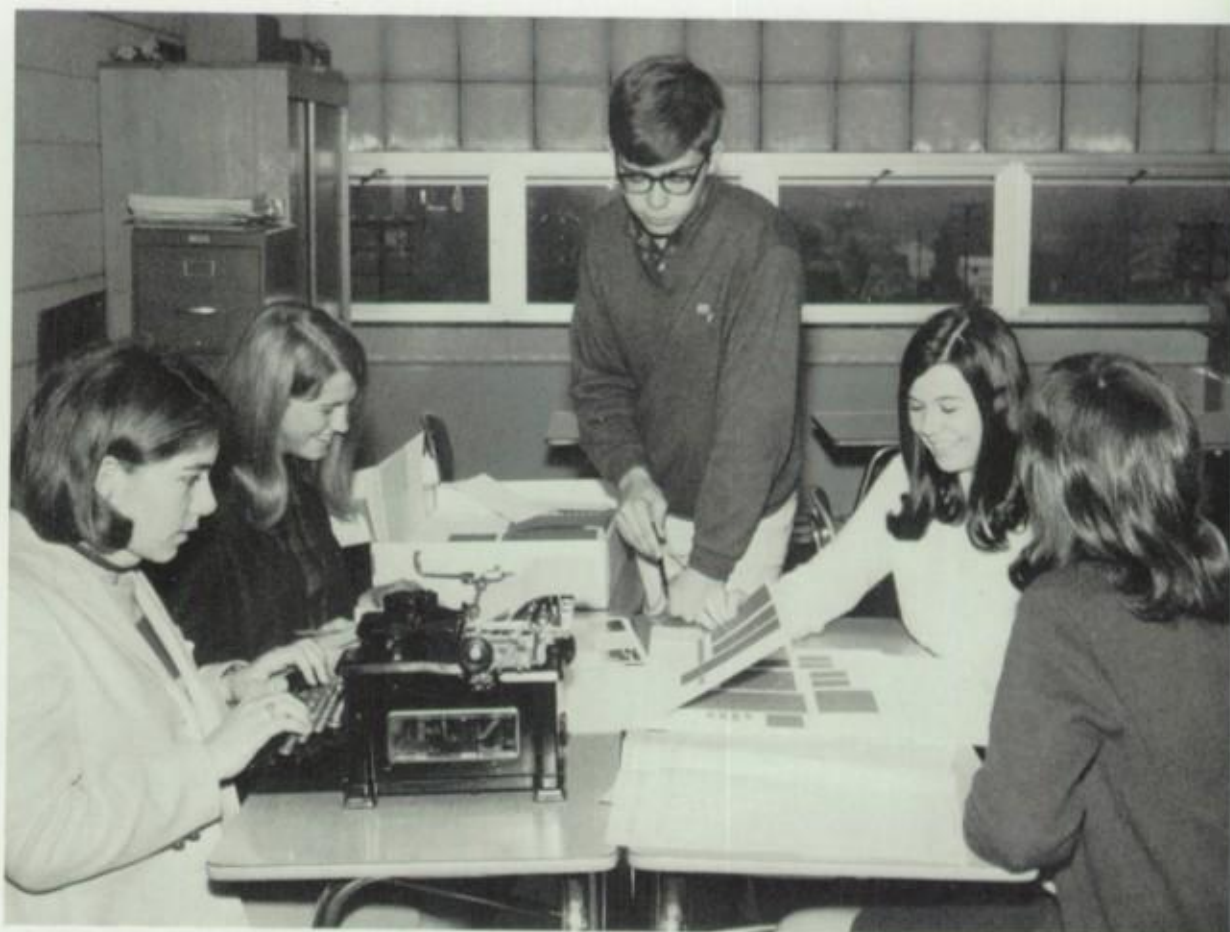

Typical senior staff member indulges during off hours.

Blue and Gold

The 1968 yearbook was the product of many difficult hours of effort put forth by the Blue and Gold Staff. From late last summer until the last annual was distributed in the spring, the staff faced all types of chores—drawing layouts, taking pictures, making numerous revisions of plans and ideas, identifying photographs, and meeting countless deadlines.

Trying to catch T.C. as it really was proved to be quite a task, but the feeling of enthusiasm and the desire to do this work made the hours fly. Each Thursday when the staff met with Mr. Miller, their advisor, their meetings proved to be entirely different from the last session. Above all, seeing a completed Blue and Gold brought a sense of accomplishment to every staff member.

Selecting pictures for the annual proved to be interesting for Advisor Mr. Miller, Editor Cathy Rozenman, and Associate Editor Susie Egbert.

After Thanksgiving, a feminine touch was added to T.C.'s gymnasium. Each Thursday brought a stampede of girls bounding into the locker room. Shortly, the gym was filled with the bouncing of basketballs and the BOIN-G-G of the trampoline, announcing the arrival of another G.A.A. meeting.

This year the Girl's Athletic Association was lead by Janis Snyder, president; Jackie Johnson, vice-president; Becky Kuntz, secretary; Deb Dariano, treasurer; Linda Kuhn and Donna Margraf, sports chairmen. All activities were under the supervision of Mrs. Mackenzie.

A Columbian G.A.A. trampoline team was organized and it presented two halftime performances during the Columbian-Bellevue basketball game.

To promote, maintain, and sponsor an active interest in all sports, and encourage good sportsmanship—these are the goals serving as a foundation for the Columbian Varsity "T" Club.

Under the leadership of Gary Coleman and the advisor, Mr. Carl Stough, the lettermen helped sponsor the Homecoming and Sports Dances and assisted at the NOL track meet. In November they attended a pro football game at Cleveland and sold programs at all home basketball games.

154 exuberant girls composed the pep squad and met every Wednesday night under the direction of President Cathy Rozenman. Each week, cheerleaders, both varsity and reserve, taught the squad numerous chants, songs, and hand motions, for the coming games.

At each home game, they were dressed in their new uniforms which consisted of royal blue jumpers, white blouses, white gloves, and a gold ensignia.

The '67-'68 Pep Squad will be remembered for their rallying cry, "Knit one, pearl two, Teddy Tornado—yoo-hoo!"

THE THESPIAN SOCIETY

Columbian has eight members of the national Thespian Society, troupe 1080, this year. To achieve the Thespian award, an actor must accumulate forty points. These points are awarded according to the importance of the role portrayed in each play, or for participation in one of the various stage crews.

Members take a break during 1984 try-outs.

Dramatics Club Productions

Drama Club members turn their attention to offstage activities during one-act play rehearsals.

It seems as though T.C. Dramatics Club members turn up in the weirdest places.

Senior lighting technician, Lee Martin, spends many voluntary hours adjusting the watts for Columbian's assembly programs.

Your stomach crawls and twists, your mind flashes black and white, perspiration runs freely, the curtain goes up.

Through the years at Columbian, many Dramatics Club students have experienced the nausea of pre-performance acting; but even more students have received the thrill of a successful play.

This year Columbian saw a unique approach in the production of Orwell's unusual play, 1984. Mr. Vallery, Drama Club advisor, directed two complete casts. This double casting allowed twice the normal number of actors and actresses to participate in acting on the stage.

Jacque Nobil is the '67-68 Drama Club president. Other officers are Lee Martin, vice-president; Susan Smoke, secretary; Gary Coleman, treasurer; Jay Lather, secretary of points and sergeant-at-arms.

Through the use of the language laboratory, guest speakers, oral French, and the examination of the French culture, members of Miss Clouse's Le Club Français, remain in close communication with French culture.

Crooked hems, burnt popovers, or waxed floors that turn yellow—these were just a few of the many experiences a Columbian home economics girl learned to cope with for use in the future.

The purpose of the Home Economics Club was to get together socially while furthering their knowledge of homemaking skills.

While Mrs. Jordan advised the members, Linda Kuhn, president, presided over the meetings, which were held once a month. The other officers were Susan Baker, vice-president; Sue Medley, secretary; Melba Sherman, secretary of points; Becky Hull, treasurer; and Charlyn Bell and Vicki Sutter, reporters.

The meetings were composed of planned programs, some of which were presented by the members themselves, as well as by guest speakers.

Librarians Practice Skills

The Library Club was a valuable service organization. Its members staffed our library every period of each day. The student librarians have many jobs ranging from checking out books to making an inventory of the complete contents of library volumes.

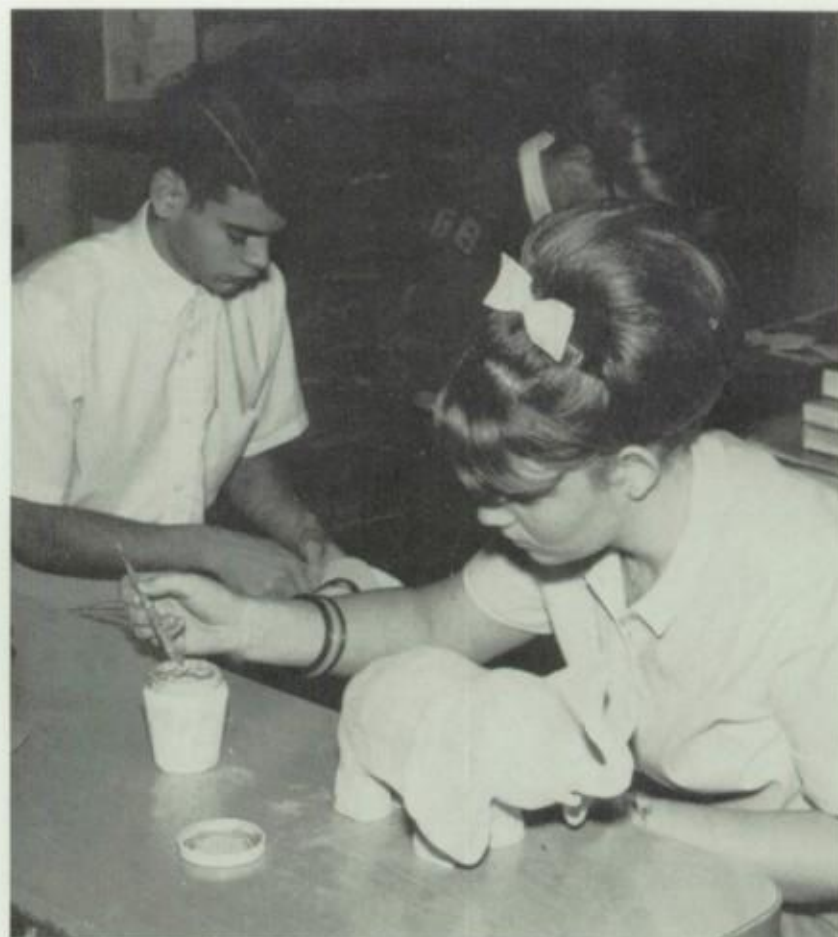

During their meetings, which were held once a month, the club discussed procedures and problems that arise in the library.

T.C. was appreciative of the jobs done by the officers—Roger Mehrman, president; Marilyn Logsdon, vice-president; Mary Brown, secretary; Pat McCarthy, reporter; Mrs. Prugh, advisor—and the entire library club during the past school year.

Art Club offered talented students an opportunity to utilize and develop their abilities. Under the capable leadership of officers Gary Coleman, President; Gene Wertz, Vice-President; Marty Kishler, Secretary; Steve Maraches, Treasurer; the club served as a social outlet for the art students. Miss Ohl was the club's advisor.

Synonymous with the name of Columbian High School is a spirited Tornado sports program. Athletics play a prominent role in the achievements of many Columbian students. The staunch efforts of Blue and Gold athletes coupled with the intense support of all Columbian fans made sports a contributing factor to the pride of belonging to T.C.H.S.

It was a year of changes for the Columbian athletic program with new coaches in the three major sports—football, basketball, and track. With these changes the Tornado teams demonstrated a winning attitude and good sportsmanship in the tradition of Columbian High School.

Cheerleaders Spark Tornadoes

T.C. cheerleaders were the key to the spreading of school spirit. Through their intense efforts and long hours of practice, they have carried the banner of Tornado spirit to all corners of the Northern Ohio League. Not only did the cheerleaders instill team following, but they were also ambassadors for Columbian wherever they went to lead the fans backing our team. Their excellent cheers represented the high standards typical of Columbian boosters.

Coach gives last minute advice.

Columbian gridders hit the practice field for pre-season drills late in August, under the firm leadership of new head coach, John Hogan. After two opening losses to non-league foes, Wapakoneta and Fostoria, the Big Blues handed the invading Bellevue Redmen a startling loss. This surprise victory was followed by NOL triumphs over Norwalk, Galion, and Upper Sandusky. However the Big Blues dropped three out of their last four decisions to Willard, state-ranked Shelby, and Bucyrus to finish with an overall 4—5 mark. The Big Blues' 4—3 league slate was good for fourth place.

The aggressiveness of the 1967 squad managed to produce the finest record for Columbian over the past few years. This impressive performance, especially considering the fact that a new coaching system was inaugurated, was a total team effort.

Spirit and moral support spurred our team to victory. The Tornadoes demonstrated good sportsmanship in both winning and losing efforts. Although the team finished fifth in the N.O.L. with a 6—8 record, the boys never stopped hustling or battling for victory. The Blues concluded the season with a 10—10 record, winning one of two games in the Heidelberg Tourney Sectional.

A year at T.C.H.S. includes a variety of activities, but it is Academics that puts time in motion and activates the whole cycle. It is the reason we go to school, and as a firm foundation upon which to build future plans, it is visible in countless expressions of daily school life . . . the seemingly endless moment before a speech . . . those baffling sessions in the language lab . . . that ghastly smell of the biology room . . . the very first time behind the wheel in driver's training . . . the exhausting relief at the finish of the last exam . . . a few moments of peace and quiet to study.

The purpose of school, which is education, can only be achieved with the faculty and administration. Although their backgrounds vary, they are united in their desire to promote ever-increasing excellence. Various phases of their work are found in their daily routine . . . getting to school early enough to finish last minute lesson planning . . . looking forward to grading that test without having to curve the scores . . . trying to explain to a parent that his child got the grade he deserved . . . sighing when it's over . . . looking ahead to a vacation before another school year begins. Some days are rough and disappointing; but seeing the students gain new insight in those short months compensates for the many frustrations endured.

ACADEMICS

Superintendent Donald Sheperd looks to a bright future for our school system.

Mrs. Judy Phillips, Miss Helen Grill, Mr. David Wetta, Miss Betty Laux, and Miss Mary Oliverio make up our fine administrative staff.

Serving on the Board of Education are: (Top to bottom) Dr. Leonard Gaydos, Mr. Clayton Shuman, Mr. Thomas Zoller, Mrs. Helena Machamer, and Mr. John Nordholt.

Mr. Harold Stephens, Assistant Superintendent, pauses for a treat.

As busy as ever, Principal James Ross prepares to mimeograph a special announcement for the faculty.

A school, like any organization, can be no better than its leaders. The effectiveness of its leaders can be no greater than their degree of dedication.

While we have regarded our administrators highly for the technical skills they have displayed, we have come to appreciate, more than anything, their devotion to the principles which all good schools try to teach.

Our administrators, as well as the faculty, exemplify the following statement found in Ecclesiastes 32:17, "I labored not for myself only, but for all them that seek learning."

Plans, Policies, Progress

Selling tickets is one of Assistant Principal Carl Stough's many tasks.

Mr. Ross shares an amusing story with a group of senior boys.

Learning to express ourselves in a distinct and meaningful manner is very important, whether in the classroom or in future endeavors. Mechanics, grammar, and spelling are only minor factors in this expression. Originality of thoughts, as well as organization and development of ideas, plays a larger role in writing. A greater understanding of the concepts of creative writing can help us to communicate more effectively with others. Through the many dimensions of poetry, fiction, nonfiction, and drama, we learn to understand, enjoy, and evaluate the writings of others.

Our library, which serves as the hub of academic life at Columbian, is of tremendous value to the English and language classes. Moreover, its services are used to advantage by everyone, at T.C.H.S.

*Best Wishes,
Ruth Dietzel*

Spanish and English instructor, Mrs. Schar, makes a suggestion.

Mrs. Greenwald chuckles at a humorous remark.

Mrs. Conrad raises a question in the midst of a speech lecture.

Mrs. Prugh keeps the library running smoothly.

In the world of today, communication goes farther than one's own language. For a better understanding among the peoples of the world, it is necessary to be familiar with foreign tongues as well. Visits to the language lab, drills in conjugations, conversations for pronunciation, and studies of the French, Spanish, and Roman cultures help to lead us to creative expression in languages.

Languages

Mr. Vallery takes on one of his many tasks—grading papers.

Taking time to reflect, Mr. Hogan relaxes.

The smell of Mrs. Key's chemistry experiment fills the lab.

Elements, Experiments,

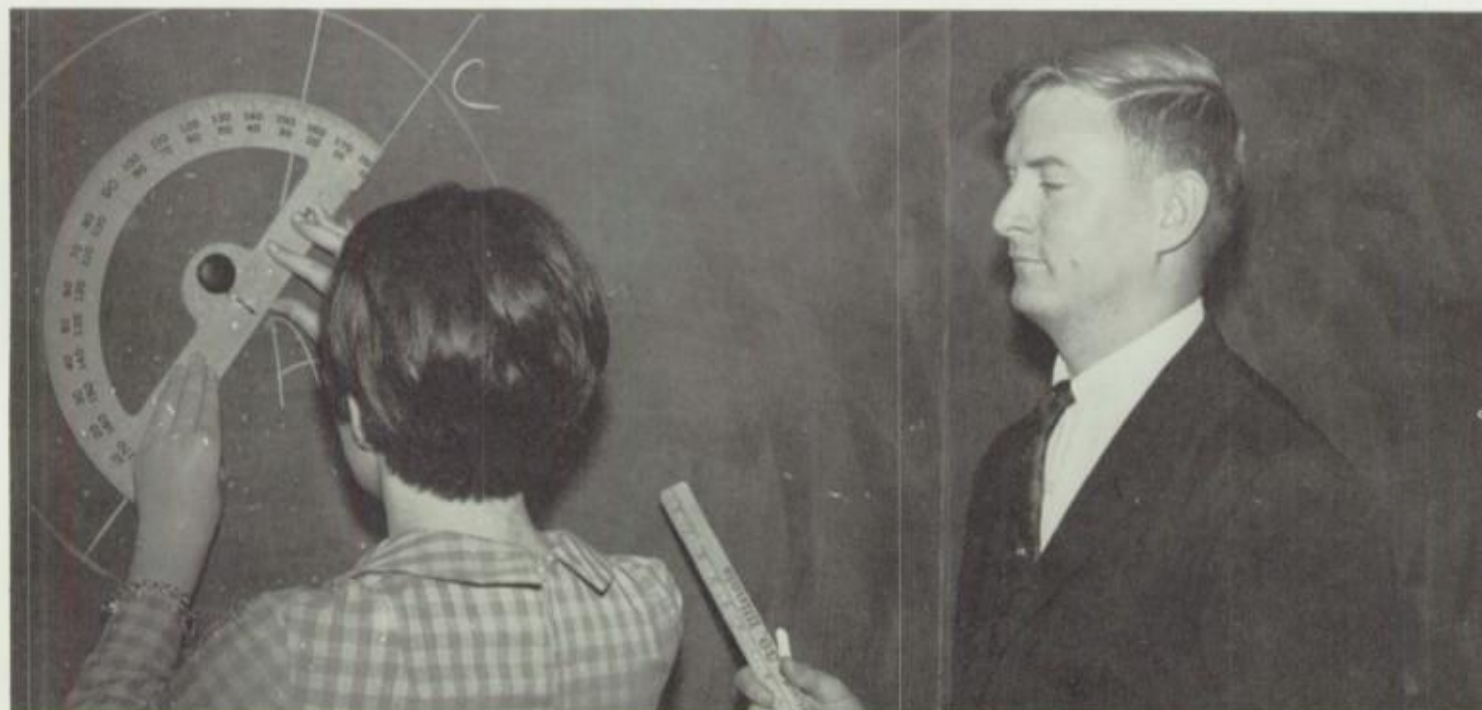

Mr. Grimes tells a student how a balance works.

Advanced math teacher, Mr. Clausing, photographs team.

A student displays her skill in geometry to Mr. Hendrickson.

Equations

When a flash of lightning shatters the dark, when rust seems to appear from nowhere after a heavy shower, or when a heredity factor causes an abnormal childbirth, we ask how and why. Science enables us to answer such questions. It also helps us to predict the outcome of similar scientific problems. The more we learn and understand, the more we seek additional knowledge.

Through the understanding of story problems, proofs, and simple experiments, we can better understand more complex ideas and can relate what we have learned to advanced theories. Thrills such as looking under a microscope for the first time and seeing billions of scurrying organisms before our eyes, correctly multiplying two enormous numbers with the help of a slide rule, and finding the weight of one molecule are all a part of our scientific accomplishments. Aiming to stimulate our curiosity and excite our minds, we surge onward—in the constantly changing scientific world.

Mr. Oberlander demonstrates the use of the microscope to prospective biologists.

A sociology group discusses a current issue with Mrs. Egbert.

Mr. Miller makes a suggestion.

Peoples, Places, Politics

History is in the making as excitement rises during election year, as questions of inflation arise, and as certain social changes arouse society. From the early Babylonians to the modern spacewalkers, many changes have taken place in the world around us.

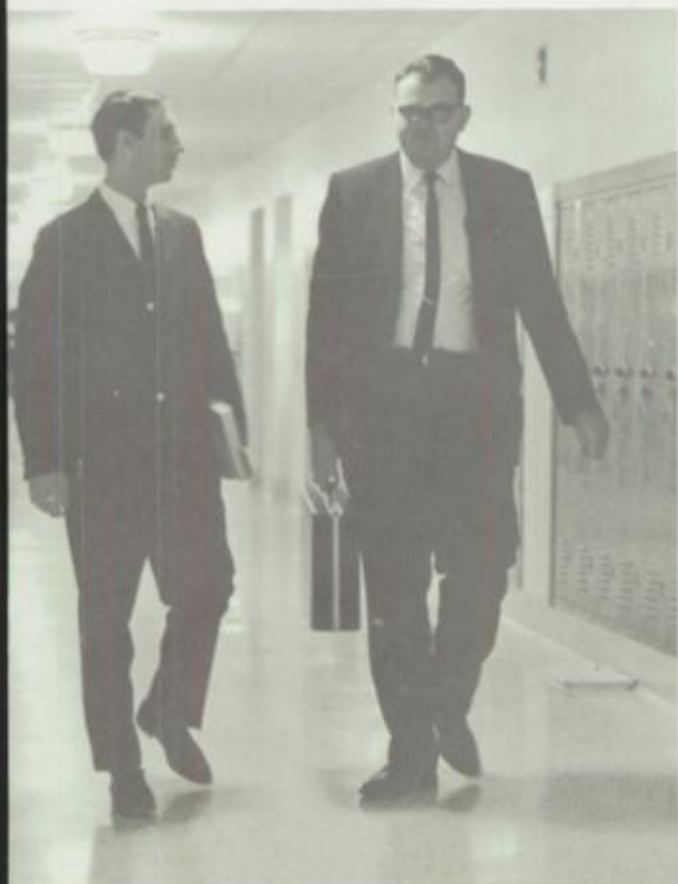

With a look into our history, we see that men of all lands, races, and religions have their own ways of life. We learn lessons from the past and use this knowledge to deal better with the problems of the present and to help plan for the future. By learning to accept constructive criticism and putting forth our best efforts, Columbian helps young citizens of today to become better leaders of tomorrow.

Mrs. Fleet takes a break to catch up on the news.

Active Enthusiasm

From the husky sound of voices keeping in time to push-ups to the feeling of personal pride and accomplishment in one's first seatdrop, we witness improved skills, unbounded energy, and good sportsmanship. As leaders of the physical education classes, Mrs. MacKenzie and Mr. Butdorf are always willing to lend a helping hand and give encouragement.

Mr. Holmer and Mr. Liston converse.

Mrs. Cronin illustrates a point.

As the study hall fills up, Mrs. Bierbaum answers a question.

Miss Grine proves that shorthand can be fun.

Vocational

The new Pep Squad material is examined by Mrs. Jordan.

The inviting aroma of a baking cake, as well as the steady beat of a pounding hammer or the rhythmic tapping of typewriter keys represent various courses of vocational training in which Columbian students take part. Courses such as home economics, typing, bookkeeping, shorthand, drawing, and shop benefit us now and in the future. Whether planning to be a homemaker, secretary, clerk, carpenter, or architect, one obtains extremely valuable knowledge and skills through this preparation.

Mrs. Wertz adjusts a faulty ribbon.

Preparation

Two shop students busy at work as Mr. Baughman gives instructions.

Enthusiastic Mrs. Miller leads the senior choir in a rousing version of "Zip-A-Dee-Doo-Dah."

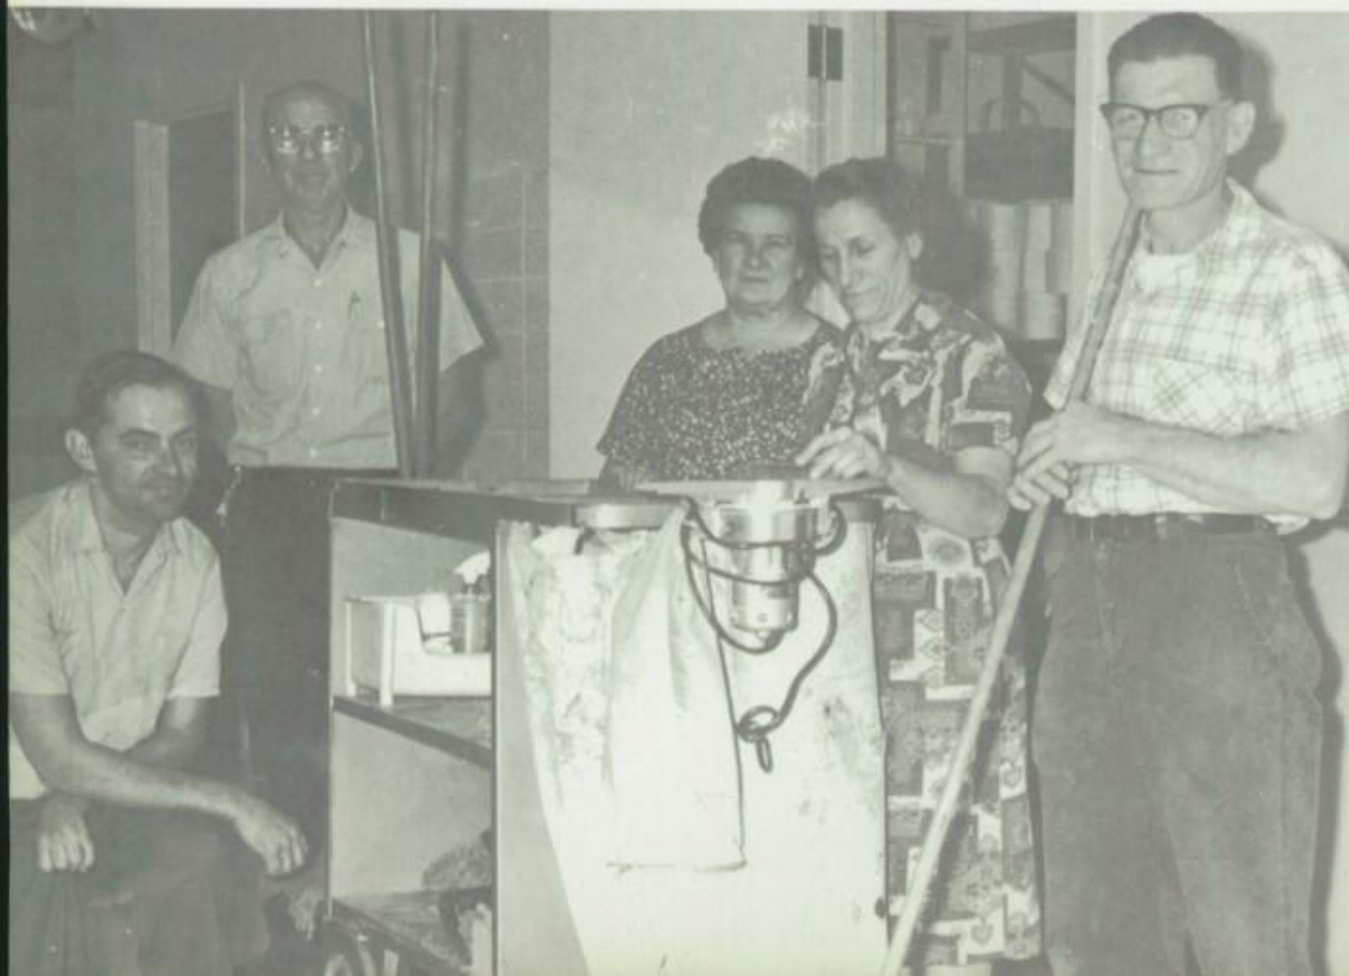

Art teacher Miss Ohl helps Pati Hemlinger add the final touches to Santa Claus.

Services, Skills,

The friendliness of the cafeteria staff makes the lunch hour more pleasant.

Through their hard work, Custodians Harry Shaull, Charles Gross, Kate Hemlinger, Lucy Drown, and Robert Towne keep T.C. spic and span.

A college-bound student receives some helpful hints concerning college board tests from Miss Adair, junior and senior guidance counselor.

Baffled sophomores are encouraged by Counselor Mr. Meerbach.

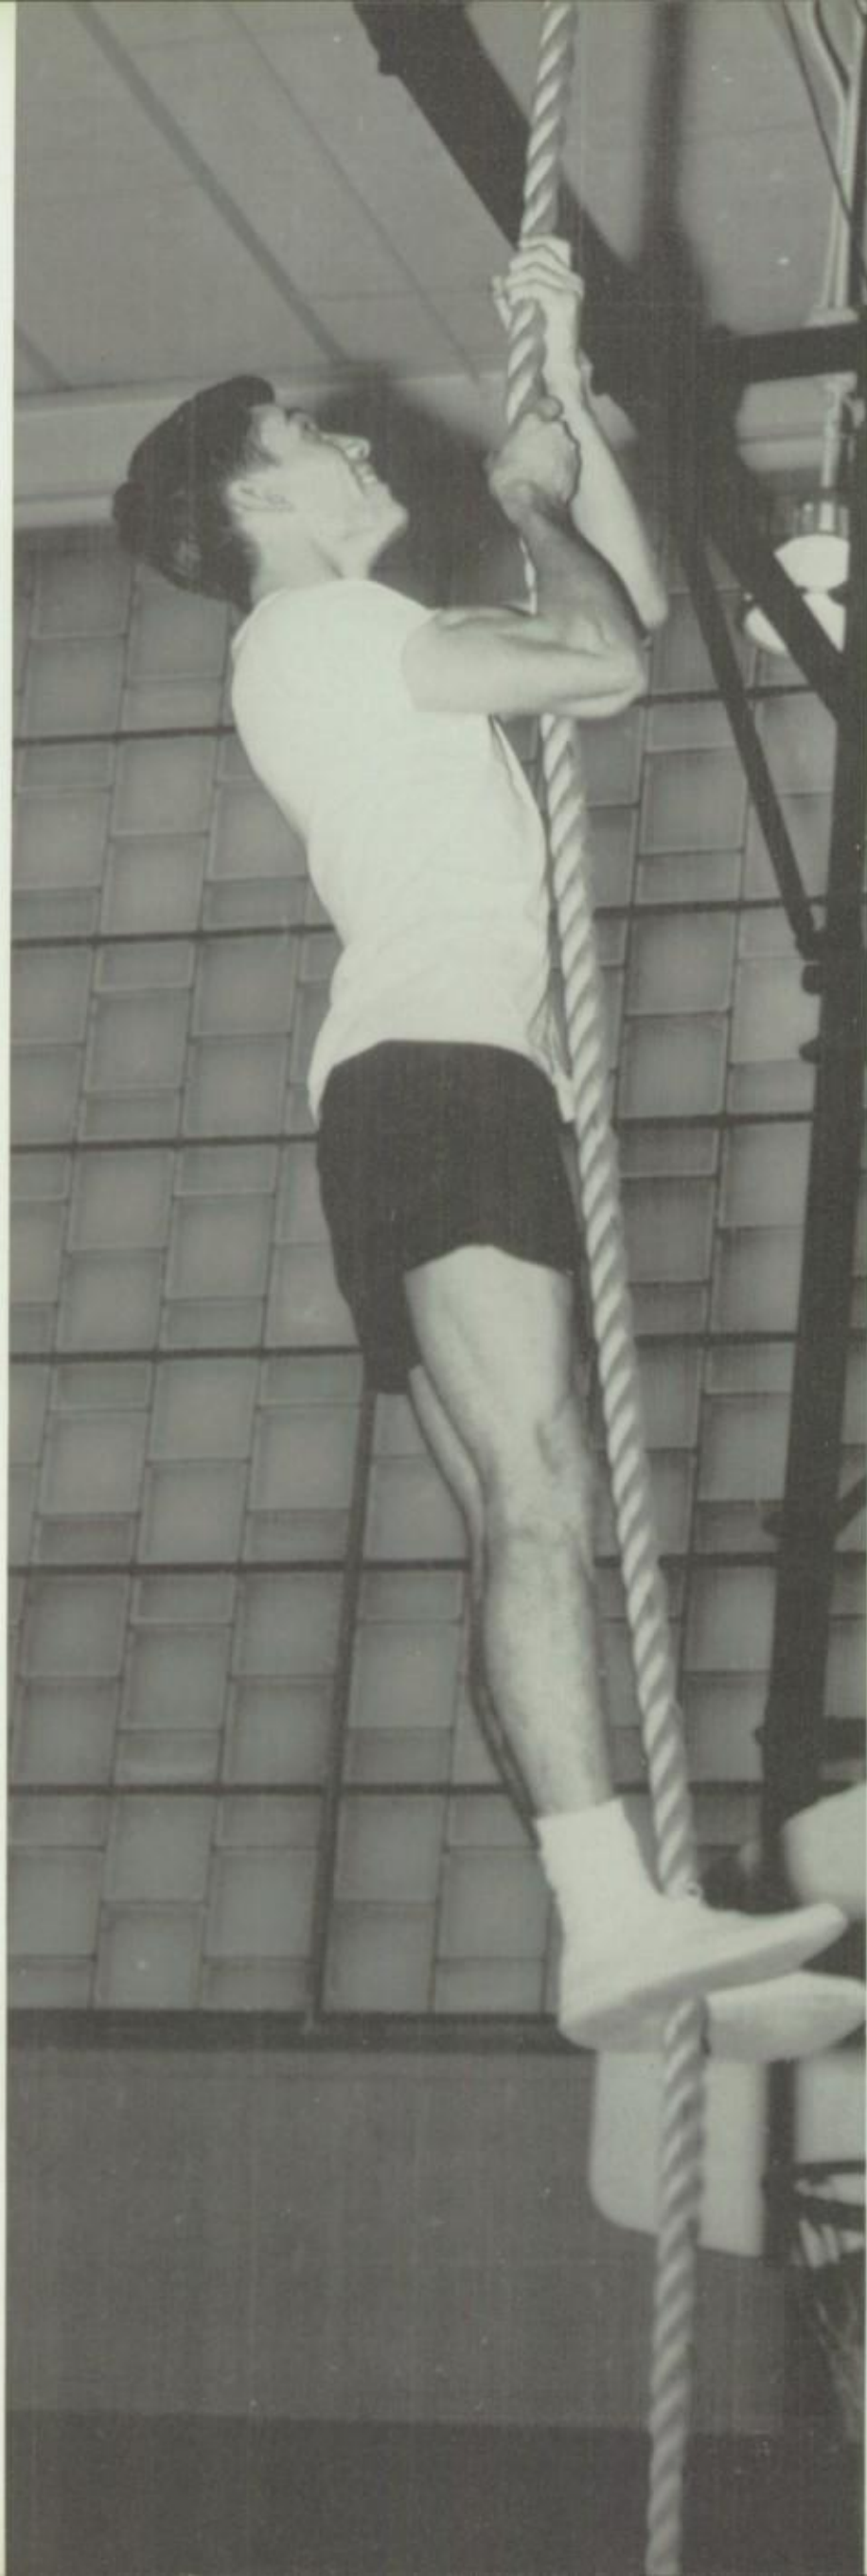

Specialization

Mrs. Pangle and Mrs. Walker, our secretaries, keep the school's official records and general business in order.

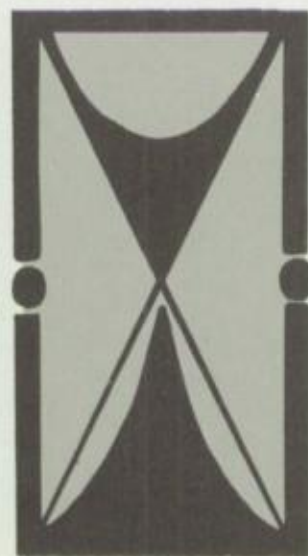

Mr. Hawk enjoys a few moments at the piano while not busy directing the band or orchestra.

The Columbian seniors faced graduation with mixed emotions. As the class of '68 separated, they realized that the moments of fun, words of wisdom, and smiles of friendship gained through their high school years could never be relived. Life at TCHS became a thing of the past; the climb was not easy but the results were rewarding.

SENIORS

At the Head of '68

In the fall of '67, two hundred fifty-two students returned to the familiar halls of Columbian to begin their senior year. This was a year for many fond memories. Preparation for college and graduation was the main concern of most seniors, and after school activities allowed them to have fun with friends. In November the class of '68 elected Art Loescher as their president and Randy Border, Sue Weimerskirch, and Danny Schatzinger as vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively.

In the spring they began to prepare their oral book reports for English, which would possibly result in competition for class speaker. When the end of the second semester approached, "senioritis" struck as plans got underway for the prom, Baccalaureate, and graduation practice.

The senior class of 1968 looked to graduation with anxiety and high spirits. They had completed twelve long years of hard work and were ready for the challenges of the future.

The activities were compiled in March, 1968.

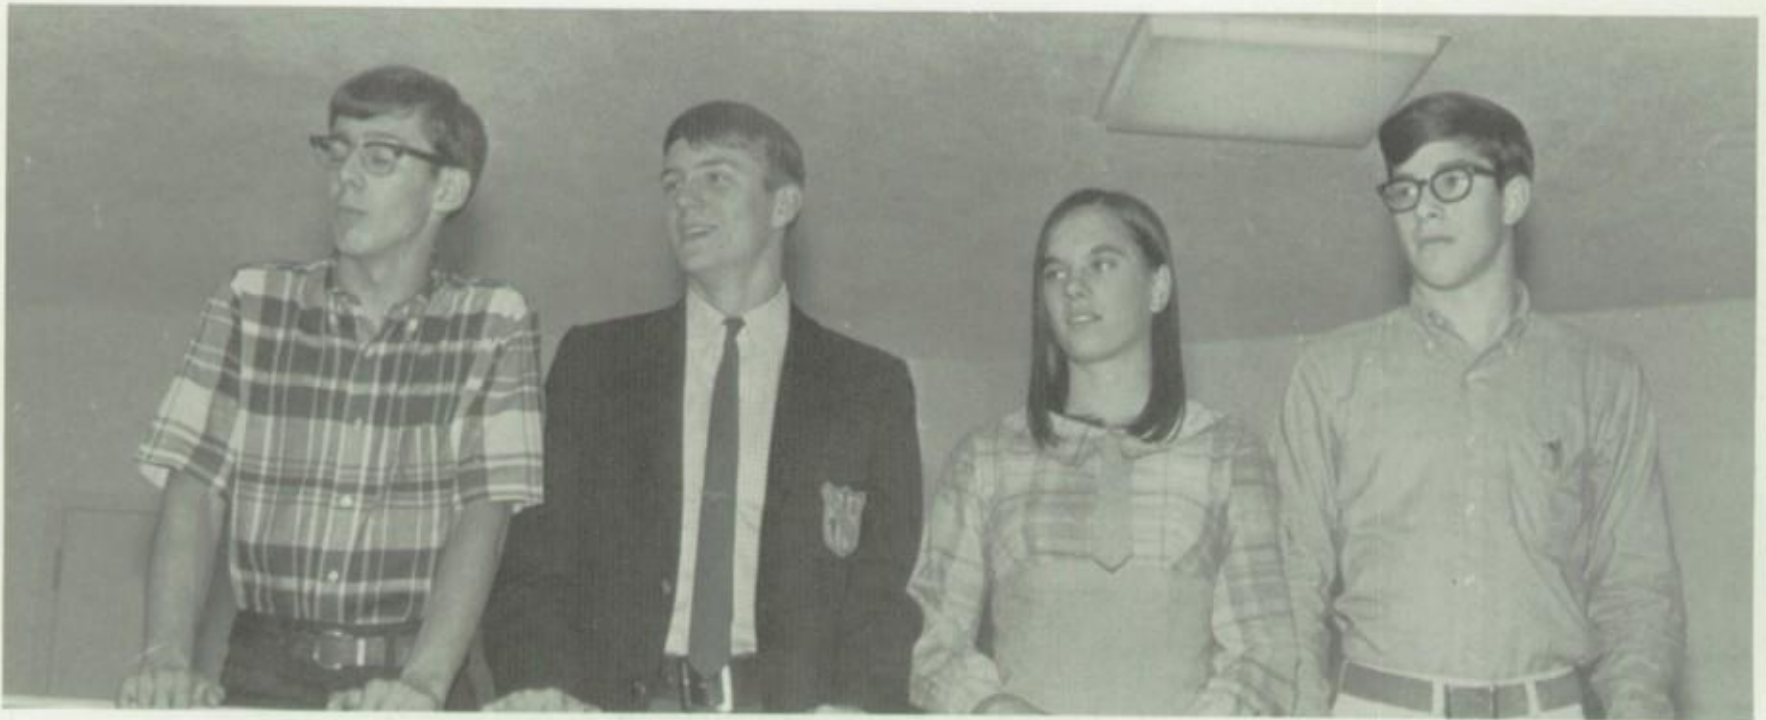

Reserve cheerleaders rousing the spirit to a fever pitch . . . selling refreshments to cheering fans with parched throats . . . the first time for stepping on the accelerator in the driver's training car . . . straining young voices in Preparatory Choir . . . juniors exhaustive work decorating for the Junior-Senior Prom . . . the surprised moment of picking up the individual picture packets . . . peeking through the gym curtain to see what's on the other side . . . excited preparation for the sophomore party . . . clammy fingers getting measured for a class ring, are a few of the many experiences that the juniors and sophomores undergo in preparing to be tomorrow's citizens.

The valuable knowledge gained from these activities will guide them in the complicated maze of life.

The Link

Time does not exist without change. As the year progresses, each season brings new responsibilities and enjoyment to each student. The present moment, the "now" may be captured in students' involvement during a unique demonstration about percussion instruments . . . in an informal chat with a retired teacher . . . while dancing to romantic music at the Christmas Dance . . . after surviving the first tournament game . . . in the excitement of travelling to an out-of-town conference.

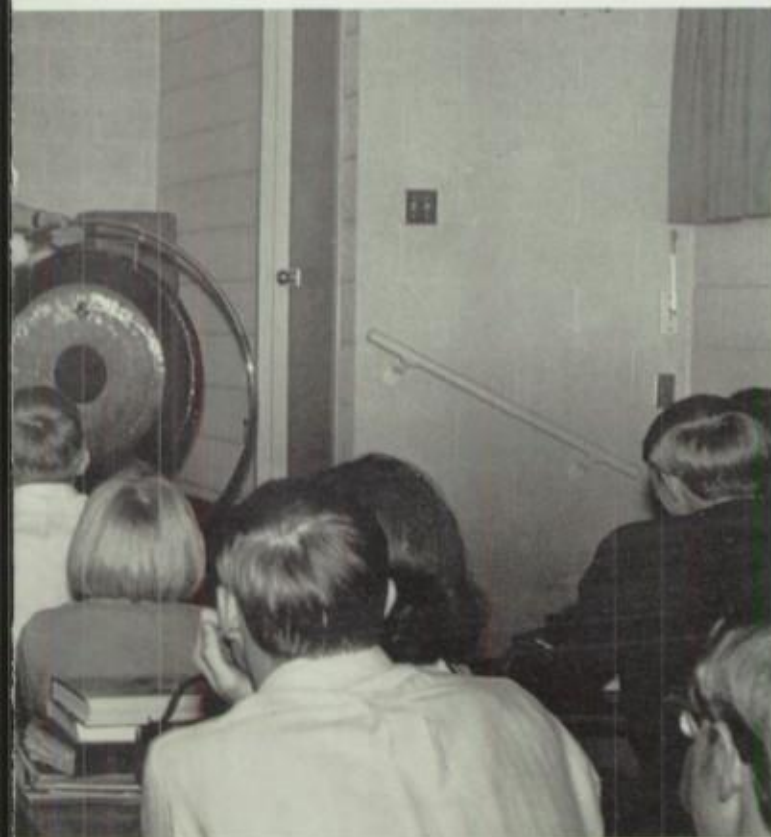

In all fields, victory and defeat are a part of time and change. For Columbian students, and especially for the class of '68, the many duties, events, and good times of today become the memories of tomorrow.

Mr. Daniel, a retired educator, listens to an opinion about college from one of his former students.

*We have all heard of Young America. He is the most current youth of the age. In knowledge
he is particularly rich.
He is a great friend of humanity. Some think him conceited and arrogant;
but has he not reason to entertain a rather extensive opinion of himself?*

Is he not the inventor and owner of the present and the sole hope of the future?
